Justin focuses his practice on defending automobile accident, premises liability, and dog bite cases. He also has experience handling medical malpractice claims against physicians, hospitals, and other healthcare providers. He is a strong advocate for his clients' best interests, and believes in a practical, fact-based approach for each case.

Justin received his law degree from the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law in Indianapolis, where he also earned certificates in both Health Law and Intellectual Property. He was selected to the Order of the Barristers after competing in the Staton Intramural Moot Court competition and served on the Executive Board of the school's Health Law Society.

Outside of work, Justin enjoys spending time with his friends and family, and stays active through tennis, running, and hiking.
