An interest in true crime first sparked Anna Quick's curiosity about the legal system, but her desire to advocate for others and make her case in the courtroom led her to pursue a career in law. After earning her undergraduate degree in psychology from Loyola University Chicago, she received her J.D. from Indiana University Maurer School of Law in 2012.

Anna spent the first six years of her career as a prosecutor with the Marion County Prosecutor's Office, where she learned to build cases from the ground up and developed the courtroom experience that continues to shape her practice. She believes effective advocacy requires honesty, hard work, and respect for everyone involved in the legal process. One experience in particular reinforced that philosophy. Following a jury trial that resulted in a defendant's incarceration, Anna received a letter from the individual thanking her for treating him with dignity rather than defining him by his actions. He shared how he was working to become a better father, husband, and member of his community. The letter is a lasting reminder to Anna that how you treat people matters, regardless of the circumstances.

She looks forward to building a general counsel practice at Kopka and developing lasting relationships with clients.

Anna's commitment to leadership extends beyond her legal practice. She served as president of Loyola University's Alpha Chi Omega chapter as an undergraduate and later spent several years as a recruitment advisor for the organization's chapter at IUPUI, mentoring young women and helping them develop confidence and leadership skills. She believes in representing the values of the organizations and people with whom she is associated.

Outside the office, Anna enjoys spending time with her husband, stepdaughter, and young daughter. An avid runner, she completed the Monumental Marathon in 2015 after a summer of dedicated training, an accomplishment that remains one of her proudest. Her family enjoys hiking, swimming, and traveling in their camper, with a goal of visiting all 48 contiguous states. She also enjoys cooking, baking, reading, and playing Mahjong.
